SOCIETY MATRON KIDNAPED IN N. Y.; $25,000 IS ASKED

Publicity Wrecks Husband's Chances of Contacting Abductor of Mrs. Alice Parsons at Bus Station as Note Directed

G-MEN IN CHARGE OF STRANGE CASE

Witnesses Tell Conflicting Stories of Seeing Victim in Auto From Which She Disappeared.

STONY BROOK, N. Y., June 11.—(Friday)—(UP)—G-men withdrew temporarily from the case of the kidnapping of Mrs. Alice Parsons early today to permit the husband, William H. Parsons, to contact the kidnappers.

Rhea Whitley, chief of the New York office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, told newspapermen he was "just marking time."

An eight-state kidnapping alarm was broadcast. It read: "Wanted, unknown man and woman in large, black sedan."

STONY BROOK, N. Y., June 10.—(UP)—Publicity has wrecked his chances of establishing contact with the kidnappers of his wife—Mrs. Alice Parsons, society heiress and "double" of Anne Morrow Lindbergh, William H. Parsons Jr., her husband, said tonight.

He made his announcement as G-men took charge of the case in an attempt to restore the gay, attractive 36-year-old woman to her home here on the tip of Long Island. She disappeared yesterday, and conflicting stories were told today by persons who saw her get into an automobile and drive away. Whether one or two persons were with her and whether one of them was a man were points on which witnesses disagreed. Behind was left a note, demanding $25,000 ransom and threatening to kill the kidnappers if the ransom was not paid by midnight.

In response to Parsons' request that the estate be cleared of police and newspapermen, everybody departed except two town policemen who remained at the gates. Federal agents were among those who departed.

Parsons' Statement.

Tonight Parsons issued this statement:

"Because of the tragic events which have occurred I want to seek the co-operation of the law enforcement agencies and the newspaper representatives in affecting the safe return of my wife. Due to the unfortunate publicity concerning the instructions of the kidnaper, it will, of course, be impracticable and useless to attempt to follow the instructions."

Tornadoes Compel Amelia To Revise African Course

Air Woman Lands at Gao After 7 Hours 55 Minute Flight from Dakar, Senegal; Hop to Khartoum Is Scheduled for Today

PARIS, June 10.—(P)—The air ministry announced that Amelia Earhart, flying across the world, landed at Gao, French West Africa, at 2:50 p. m. today, Greenwich time (9:50 a. m., Atlanta time), after a hop from Dakar, Senegal.

Telegrams from the French military commandant at Gao to the ministry reported the American airwoman made a perfect landing after a flight of 7 hours 55 minutes for the 1,140 miles.

Miss Earhart and her navigator, Captain Fred Noonan, indicated they intended to hop off early tomorrow from El Fasher on her way to Khartoum, in the western Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, about 1,750 miles east and slightly south of Gao.

Weather conditions have caused her to alter her original trans-African route, which called for a stop at Port Lamy, southeast of Lake Chad.

From El Fasher it is an easy 500-mile hop to Khartoum, Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, probably Miss Earhart's last African halting place. From there she plans to fly to Aden, across the Red Sea.

Gao is on the Niger river, almost on the meridian of Greenwich and the 16th parallel of north latitude.

The airwoman altered somewhat her previously set course on account of unfavorable weather.

She had planned to fly her silver, twin-engine monoplane to Naimy, French Niger colony, 250 miles southeast of Gao and due east of Dakar.

Arising before dawn, Miss Earhart hurried to the airfield where she received reports of barometric depressions and tornadoes in the Sudanese region in the heart of Africa over which she had charted her course.

So she decided to swing slightly to the north to Gao but maintained the general direction of her itinerary through the center of the continent toward Lake Chad, French Equatorial Africa.

Eager to be on her aerial way, the flyer climbed into her ship with Noonan, after thanking French Colonial Aeronautics, Air France and airport officials for their help.

Her plane made a 500-yard run and lifted easily despite its heavy fuel load. It circled the field once in a farewell gesture and sped into the east.

HUNDREDS MARCH ON MONROE PLANT

SENATE APPROVES TAX-DODGING QUIZ

Mayor Asks for Troops As Renewal of Steel Company Battle Nears.

MONROE, Mich., June 11.—(Friday)—Mayor Daniel A. Knaggs dispatched another request for troops to Governor Frank Murphy early today to defend the city against a sympathy march of Pontiac members of the United Automobile Workers of America.

The mayor ordered uniformed police on duty at the Newton Steel Company's plant since a clash with pickets that marked the plant's reopening last night, to return to the city in preparation for the march.

By the Associated Press.

Police smashed through a band of steel pickets yesterday at Monroe, Mich., opening a path for 800 non-strikers to return to work in the Newton Steel Company plant.

The encounter was brief and beclouded by gas. It came after two hours of futile negotiations between Governor Frank Murphy and leaders of the Committee for Industrial Organization strikers and the police, headed by Chief Jesse Fisher, of Monroe.

It was the first successful move of Republic Steel Corporation, one of three large strike-affected producers, to reopen a mill.

Resumption of work was set for 4 p. m. but for two hours the 200 special police and 120 pickets, including 20 women, faced one another while Governor Murphy pleaded for a delay of the crisis. Then the police line, followed by 800 workers in automobiles, charged.

Pickets Yield to Gas.

Pickets hurled missiles and swung clubs, but yielded quickly before the gas, and the workers passed down the road to the plant, which employs about 1,300 men. It was closed by strike May 28.

The ominous situation at Monroe drew the attention of the entire steel strike front, reaching into seven states and affecting some 73,000 workers.

It was the second clash of the Mysterious Hysteria Attacks 200 In Factory, Causing Pandemonium

PARIS, June 11.—(Friday)—(UP)—Two hundred women employees of a factory in Thumeries, near Lille, were reported today to have been seized suddenly with fainting and hysteria attacks.

Doctors were unable to explain the incident except as an incomprehensible collective psychopathological attack.

The mass seizure began after one woman fell unconscious. Others rushed to her aid but as soon as they reached her, they began to shriek and whirl about as though dizzy. Some fainted, others rolled on the floor.

Pandemonium broke out in the factory when other women began going into convulsions. They apparently were affected by seeing their companions.

Some women attacked others, tearing off clothes, raking faces with fingernails and keeping up a continuous shrieking.

Factory doctors raced in, suspecting gas. They ordered the plant evacuated immediately. Men workers were called to get out those women unaffected.

The symptoms spread among the women even after their removal, when they saw others writhing as they were carried out on stretchers.

Doctors sampled the factory air and found it normal.

Blood tests were given to the victims immediately but they showed no signs of gas or other intoxicants.

Doctors declared the symptoms and after-effects were typically nervous. They believed it was due to collective hysteria.

The women recovered gradually, except for four younger ones who complained of severe pains.

INSURGENTS OPEN DRIVE TO SMASH BILBAO'S DEFENSE

Airmen, Artillery Soldiers Hurl Tons of Explosive Shells on 'Iron Ring' in Massed Attack on Basque Capital City.

LOYALISTS BOMB SEVILLE SUBURB

Bombardment, Killing 8, of Civil Population Is First Undertaken by Loyalists in Civil War.

W. H. THE INSURGENTS BE-SIEGING BILBAO, June 10.—(P)—Insurgent airmen and artillery rained tons of explosives on the main defense system of Bilbao today as a break in the rains provided the first favorable conditions for bombardment in several days.

Squadrons of Generalissimo Francisco Franco's bombers raked the narrow strip of territory still intervening between the insurgent forces and their prize.

The airmen and gunners paid chief attention to Bilbao's "iron ring," the defense system that still holds back the insurgent tide after more than two months of siege.

The insurgent infantry meanwhile is poised for what their command hopes will be the final dash across the territory the cannon and bombers were pounding in preparation.

With them were great quantities of mobile equipment and supplies.

DAVILA LAUNCHES "DEATH BLOW" TODAY

HENDAYE, Franco - Spanish Frontier, June 10.—(UP)—General Jose Fidal Davila, Rebel commander on the Spanish Basque front, is prepared to launch his "death blow" against Bilbao tomorrow morning with 50,000 troops and 180 warplanes, frontier reports said tonight.

The new insurgent general, who succeeded the late General Emilio Mola in command of the Basque offensive, was said to have predicted that his troops will smash

WELFARE BOARD SPEEDS AID PLANS

10,000 Pension Checks To Be Issued Before July 1, Director Murdaugh Says

The State Public Welfare Department became a hive of activity yesterday preparing to pay old-age pensions next month under terms of two amendments ratified by voters Tuesday.

First of the amendments to have an active effect on the state government, the two social security provisions will make it possible for the department to disburse $3,250,000 for aid to the aged needy, dependent children, and needy blind.

The money will not become available until July 1, but Welfare Director Lamar Murdaugh said at least 10,000 old-age pension checks will be issued during that period.

Checks To Average $10.

The payments, he predicted, will average $10 a higher average than that for other southern states having social security laws.

The checks will be disbursed by mail through a central office in Atlanta in accordance with a "plan of audits and accounts" just approved by the Federal Social Security Board.

Under this same plan, counties which contribute 10 per cent of the cost of pensions in their respective districts—each month will submit to the state board a requisition showing the name, address and pension amount of each beneficiary.

The counties will be required to submit their part of the cost along with the requisitions, Murdaugh said.

State Pays 40 Per Cent.

Of the remaining 90 per cent of the cost, the state will pay 40 per cent and will receive a grant of 50 per cent from the federal government.

The State Welfare Board will assemble here June 17 to approve county-commission ap-

Police Sign Names in Bullets on Bad Men's Car

Running gun battle with police left these marks on the car from which H. L. Turner, 29, ran, only to be felled by a bullet which killed him. Miss Muriel Tyler, of East Point, points at the bullet hole in the rear of the car, where police hit. The bullet holes in the rear window were made as the men in the car fired at their police pursuers.

GEORGIA ASKS U. S. TO CUT OFF LIQUOR

Defeat of Repeal Brings Request To Stem Flow To Save State Revenue.

The state of Georgia, through Revenue Commissioner T. Grady Head, yesterday called on the federal government to halt the flow of liquor into Georgia in view of Tuesday's popular vote against prohibition repeal.

In a letter to the Federal Alcohol Administration in Washington, Commissioner Head, who has charge of the licensing and regulation of alcoholic beverages legalized under state law, cited Tuesday's vote and asked for assistance of the federal government under the twenty-first amendment to the constitution of the United States, which provides for federal protection of dry states.

Enforcement Demanded.

Meanwhile, the Rt. Rev. William N. Ainsworth, bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church called for rigid enforcement of the dry law and was joined in his plea by Representative James V. Carmichael, of Cobb county, a wet legislator in the general assembly.

Commissioner Head did not make public his letter to federal authorities but he issued a formal statement saying he thought the federal liquor licenses should be revoked. His statement follows:

"The results of the referendum for the legalization and control of whisky in Georgia makes it most clear that Georgia must have enforcement of its prohibition laws if it is to protect its revenues. At present, best information available indicates there are some 5,000 federal licenses permitting the sale of whisky in force in Georgia. The sale of such whisky is illegal under our law, and under the provision of the twenty-first amendment to the federal constitution Georgia is entitled to federal protection from the importation of whisky. The voters of Georgia have heretofore authorized the sale of beer in this state, and the

Doctor, Blonde, Scout Live Plot Fit for a Movie

LE HAVRE, France, June 10.—(P)—The French Surete Nationale searched tonight for a Rumanian doctor and a Brazilian Boy Scout representative who disappeared mysteriously from the liner Raul Soarez.

Pedro Peroni, the Boy Scout chief, vanished while looking for "a beautiful blonde German girl." Dr. R. Dadiani disappeared while looking for Peroni.

Detectives of the Surete said they had ascertained that Dadiani owed 800,000 francs ($26,400) to Peroni; that the Rumanian left to be known he was going to Warsaw to collect a legacy of 3,000,000 francs ($132,000) and would then repay Peroni.

Doctor Sought.

Police of France and on the continent were asked tonight to aid in the effort to locate the missing doctor.

The Raul Soarez, bound for Hamburg, was out of Rio de Janeiro when the first in a strange series of events occurred.

The captain of the liner said he saw Peroni being pursued by an unidentified man demanding Peroni pay him 12,000 francs ($340). Peroni, said the captain, signed a

PHONE RATE CUTS SOUGHT BY STATE

Charges in 66 Georgia Towns, Long Distance Tolls, Bring Board Order

The Georgia Public Service Commission yesterday cited the Southern Bell Telephone Company to show cause why its local rates should not be reduced in 66 of the cities and towns in which it operates and also to show cause why its intrastate long distance rates all over Georgia should not be slashed.

Hearing was set for July 20.

In addition, the telephone company was called upon to show cause why its charges for extra service, such as handsets, extensions, long cords, limited service phones and dial charges, should not be reduced.

Structure Involved.

The commission order, voted on motion of Chairman Jud P. Wilhoit, also called upon the telephone company to show cause "why the rate for depreciation should not be fixed by the commission for the year 1938 and annually thereafter."

Chairman Wilhoit declared that the investigation of the commission, already made, shows that the income of the telephone company at present is higher than at any time since 1929. In the 66 cities and towns involved the magneto type telephone or sets with a hand crank attached is in service.

Meanwhile at the request of President P. S. Arkwright the commission delayed until July 12 a hearing on a rule nisi calling on the Georgia Power Company to show cause why its commercial rates should not be reduced.

Mr. Arkwright asked the commission for more time to assemble data, pointing out that the company recently lost by death its chief counsel and its chief auditor. Because these two officials died in the midst of preparation of the case the commission read-

Autoist Badly Hurt In Crash With Trolley

Seriously injured when the automobile he was driving crashed head-on into a street car early this morning on Peachtree road near Belmont drive, Andrew B. Madison, of 181 Roswell road, was admitted to Grady hospital. The street car was badly damaged and Madison's car was demolished.

Hospital attaches reported he suffered internal injuries, a fractured leg and severe lacerations about the face and head.

The only explanation of the accident came from witnesses, who said Madison might have thought the street car, which was southbound, was going to turn from the double track into a single track.

Beauty Secondary Asset to Victor In Motion Picture Talent Search

Beauty, contrary to general belief, is the least essential requirement for a successful career in the movies, according to C. T. Burgess, talent scout for Astral Productions, Hollywood.

Burgess is in Atlanta in connection with the screen tests to be given by The Constitution for a full week on the screen of the Rialto theater. Then after a run of a week at five of the Bach theaters, they will then be sent to Hollywood, where they will be viewed by executives of the major film companies.

"Hollywood is full of the most beautiful women in the world," Burgess said yesterday. "Many of them never get inside a studio gate. The reason? Beauty is a comparatively common virtue."

"It is impossible to describe what we want in the way of screen actors and actresses. The simplest description is that we want potential stars, new faces, new names."

"It is an intangible something that skyrockets an unknown to fame virtually over night. Possibly it may be the voice. Then again it may be an individual smile, a gesture of the hands. Whatever it is, it's something that captures an audience. Stardom is often built on some simple characteristic."

"There is an important point to be brought out. Interviews can prove but little. Beauty and popu-

H. L. TURNER SLAIN IN FLIGHT AFOOT FROM AUTO WRECK

Shooting of Suspect in Kidnap of Young Blonde Climaxes Police Pursuit of Trio Punctuated by Hot Burst of Gunfire.

DEAD MAN THIRD OF TURNER CLAN

Confederates Making Good Escape Have Records as Fugitives From Gangs on Theft Counts.

A well-aimed police bullet ended the life and brief crime career of H. L. Turner, 29, one of the three notorious Turner brothers, shortly before noon yesterday in Fulton county.

The shooting climaxed a hot police pursuit of an automobile, driven by Turner, which drove at high speed down a 12-foot embankment at the dead end of West Mercer and Pierce streets, landing on its wheels in the garden of C. M. Mount.

Killed in Flight.

Turner was shot as he and his companions fled from the vehicle. His companions were believed to be his brother, Chester Turner, an escapee from the Cherokee county chain gang, and Vincent (Bill) Baker, also a chain gang escapee.

The shooting signalled an intensive manhunt for the dead man's companions. A score of bloodhounds was used in the search, as police and deputized citizens scoured Fulton county and surrounding territory.

A little before midnight the chase was ordered abandoned, after cordons of police had combed the wooded area known as the Uttoy hill section without success. It was believed that at least one of the fugitives was armed with a pistol.

Turner, known as Henry L., was a brother of Forrest Turner, notorious escapee, who is now serving a term for robbery in the Fulton county convict camp. This brother-figure, in many sensational escapes from various Georgia prison camps.

Believed Kidnapers.

The dead man and his companions were believed by police to have been the men who kidnaped Miss Verline Stargel, 18, of Gainesville, and forced her to join a filling station holdup Tuesday night, before she finally escaped from her captors.

Events which led to the killing of Turner began at about 11 o'clock yesterday morning when Patrolmen E. D. West and J. W. Gilbert of Fulton county police, spotted a new model coach at Washington and Church streets, East Point.

The officers noted that the car had no license plates, and they sought to question the three men in the vehicle about this oversight.

Two men were in the front seat of the coach, while the third sat in the rear, the officers said. Turner was driving. The officers

KARPIS SUSPECTS FREED BY JUDGE

'Can't Convict a Man on Suspicion,' Jurist Observes.

MIAMI, Fla., June 10.—(AP)—Although he said circumstances were suspicious, Federal Judge Alexander Akerman by a direct verdict today freed Joseph H.

Adams and Henry (Duke) Randall of charges they harbored Alvin Karpis here in the winter of 1934-35 while the outlaw was sought for the Edward G. Bremer kidnapping.

Judge Akerman observed, "We've got nothing here but suspicious circumstances. They were very suspicious, but you can't convict a man on suspicion."

Adams, manager of El Comodoro hotel, and Randall, an employee of his dog track, were on trial on two counts charging harboring Karpis and conspiring to harbor him. Prosecutors indicated the other charge would be dropped.

TAMPA, Fla., June 10.—(AP)—

A year ago, the teachers got a dividend of five weeks' salary, or $142,217, but school board members were quick to explain that they have less money this year, due to reduced county tax collections.

METHODISTS MEET IN ST. PETERSBURG

Delegates To Vote Today on Unification of Northern, Southern Church.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., June 10.—(AP)—Southern Methodists opened their 94th annual conference here tonight with Bishop Sam R. Hay, of Houston, Texas, presiding. During the day Bishop Hay met with the presiding elders from all sections of Florida in a closed session to determine appointments for the coming year. These will be read early Monday morning.

Vote of the conference on its stand for unification of northern and southern Methodists and the balloting on delegates for the general conference in Birmingham next April are the major points to be considered during the conference which closes Monday.

According to Bishop Hay, the south is almost unanimously in favor of the unification plans, and the vote tomorrow will be the first of any southern conference on this question.

Bishop Hay said the outlook for the southern Methodist church is bright, pointing to the recent completion of a prosperous campaign that has brought an extra $500,000 to the denomination for mission work.

ITALO-NAZI RETURN TO PATROL NEARS

Britain Maneuvers Russia From 4-Power Group Discussing Conditions.

LONDON, June 10.—(AP)—Germany and Italy are expected to return next week to the 27-nation Non-Intervention Committee and to its patrol of warships seeking to prevent foreign armament shipments to Spain.

Informed British opinion contended tonight the two nations with Britain and France will have agreed by that time on measures to protect the patrol ships.

Germany and Italy had made such guarantees for safety the basis of their return to the committee. They withdrew May 31 in protest against Spanish government attack on their ships.

Both nations retained their force in Spanish waters, however. Germany and Italy had in effect a patrol of their own.

Russia Blocked.

The agreement bringing Italy and Germany back into the neutrality fold will be strictly a four-power question, it was made clear here with refusal of a Russian request that the safety guarantees be discussed by the full committee.

Great Britain indicated her belief additional conferees would result only in further friction.

Present plans are for completion of a four-power understanding this week end, assent to its conditions by both government and insurgent Spain, and then a full session of the committee.

Both Italy and Germany would participate in the full session as before their withdrawal. Thus they would return with Russia having no voice in the conditions.

Ambassadors Confer.

British Foreign Secretary Eden saw the French, German and Italian ambassadors separately today and arranged to confer with all together on Friday.

They then would begin drafting an agreement to protect patrol ships along these lines:

Assurance that there would be no future attacks on patrolling vessels; extension of safety zones for neutral shipping; immediate consultation by the powers on possible action if the preceding provisions were violated.

SPECIAL DECREE SUSPENDS LAWYER

Involved Attorney Reported To Have Left Town.

Attorney Robert Maginnis was suspended from the practice of law in a special order signed by the judges of the Fulton superior court yesterday. His suspension had been recommended by the special ethics committee of the Atlanta bar.

James F. Haas, secretary of the association, said Maginnis had been notified to answer charges made by A. L. Bennett, of 367 Lake avenue, and had failed to make response. He has left town, Haas said.

The charges grew out of a $25 land transaction. The suspension will remain in effect until the charges are answered.

CLEMENCY IS DENIED, NEGRO TO DIE TODAY

From his hospital bed, Governor Rivers yesterday declined to extend executive clemency to Will Wright, Atlanta negro, who is under sentence to be electrocuted this morning for attacking a young white girl. Wright, a former employee of the Grant Park zoo, was convicted several months ago. The case was presented to the Governor yesterday by his secretary, Downing Musgrove.

"There are no circumstances in this case on which I could base any action in Wright's behalf," the Governor said.

The negro is in the death cell at Milledgeville awaiting the hour of execution.

The child fell backwards into the pot last Tuesday while she was playing ball in the yard at her aunt's home. She was badly scalded and died last night at her home here. Peace Justice Francis J. Warren ordered the autopsy.

LOOK AT THE CALENDAR BEFORE YOU BUY TISSUE

• You can learn something about tissue values by looking at a paper calendar—for both are made from wood.

But all wood is part soft and part hard. And the soft part is so soft and downy that celanese garments are made of it. It is called Lignone.

The harsh part is called Lignone—fine in cardboards and rough, tough papers. But not so fine in toilet tissue. It makes toilet tissue coarse and harsh.

THERE IS NO LIGNONE IN NORTHERN TISSUE—it is 100% Cellulose! Try this marvelously softer and safer tissue. Ask for Northern Tissue today—at your dealer's.

COURT DAY FILLED BY MURDER TRIALS

Three Cases Dispatched With Conviction, Plea of Guilt And Acquittal.

Three murder trials held the attention of criminal division of Fulton superior court yesterday. One defendant was found guilty of manslaughter, one entered a guilty plea and the third came clear on a directed verdict. Jack Saul was sentenced by Judge E. D. Thomas to serve 15 to 20 years on the chain gang for the voluntary manslaughter of Hubert Adams, 27, stone cutter. Saul is alleged to have fatally stabbed Adams during a fight in a Fair street taproom March 20. The defendant claimed he stabbed in self-defense after Adams had attacked him with a beer bottle. The trial required two days. Henry Phinazee, 44, pleaded guilty to the manslaughter of Charles Hughes, of College Park, March 21, and was sentenced to serve 7 to 12 years on the chain gang. After a short trial a directed verdict of not guilty was ordered in favor of Joe Cloud, who was charged with murdering George Weaver April 25.

11th Year on Bench Noted by Etheridge

Judge A. L. Etheridge, of municipal court, yesterday observed his 11th anniversary on the bench of the court. "I have found work on the trial bench most interesting," the judge said. "The human problems that come for solution afford a fine opportunity for genuine service. Unhappily, in the administration of law, as in life, justice is not always done but I think one may lead a useful and happy life in that work if he deals kindly, listens patiently, thinks straight and decides impartially between man and man." Judge Etheridge was appointed to the bench in 1926 by the judges of the superior court of Fulton county.

Whether you make your own ice cream or buy it, you can count on its being one of the favorite dishes to be enjoyed by the family. There are many ways to dress up the ice, sherberts and ice creams, but the addition of fruit preserves and jams offers so much in the way of convenience and variety that it undoubtedly heads the list. Sundaes are always a delight to children and make a wholesome and welcome dessert when made from any one of a variety of fruit preserves available in the grocery stores today. Keep your reserve shelf always filled with an assortment of these and serve them often. You will find they have a year-round appeal. The adults of the family will find this suggestion adaptable to many occasions such as teas, bridge parties and holiday gatherings. Ice cream contains all the food elements found in milk, and milk is said to be our most nearly perfect natural food. Therefore, when serving ice creams to your family, you are giving them wholesome food in a form that they all enjoy. In adding preserved fruits in combination with ice creams you are adding the food nutrients of the fruits as well. With modern refrigeration methods available one can store for several days commercial ices, sherberts and ice creams. This way the busy homemaker can be prepared at a moment's notice to concoct one of these delightful fruit sundaes that will prove to be a satisfying food surprise to all members of the family, as well as the unexpected guests. A few of the more popular flavors used for this purpose are strawberry, raspberry, pineapple, peach and cherry. Most everyone enjoys nuts in combination with ice creams and following is a sauce for ice cream that introduces this well-liked flavor by the use of peanut butter.

Florida Forbids Sale Of Liquor to Indians

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., June
10.—(AP)—Florida today officially banned sale of "firewater" to its Seminole Indian population.

An act of the recent legislature, signed by the Governor, makes it unlawful to sell liquor, wines and beer to Indians even in counties where sale of liquor is legal.

Most of the Indians live in the south Florida Everglades area, but migrate in the fall as far north as central Florida to escape the rainy season in their lowlands home.

BUYING CITY HALL IS NEWS TO RIVERS

Governor Says He's Heard
Nothing of Reported
Deal for State.

Governor Rivers yesterday said he has heard nothing of the reported movement to purchase the Atlanta city hall for use by the state, as Mayor Hartsfield reiterated his intention to "contact the Governor as soon as he is able to see me."

The Governor is at a local hospital, where he has been resting from an arduous campaign in re-half of his New Deal amendments for Georgia.
Governor Rivers said:
"I have heard nothing whatever of any plan to buy the Atlanta city hall. The state capitol is crowded, but no space like that of the city hall is needed."
Real estate men purporting to represent state officials visited Councilman John A. White several days ago, and indicated that a serious movement to buy the city hall would be made in the event the amendments passed Tuesday.

White was approached again
Wednesday at the same time that Mayor Hartsfield said he planned to offer the city hall to the Governor for state use at its cost price, about $1,450,000.

ROOSEVELT NAMES GEORGE FAVORITES TO U. S. POSTS HERE

Act Seen as Relieving Tension Over Selection of Allen.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.
WASHINGTON, June 10.—Tension over the confirmation of Marion H. Allen, of Milledgeville, as collector of internal revenue for Georgia, is believed to have been relieved by the action of President Roosevelt today in sending to the senate the nominations of T. Hoyt Davis and Edward B. Doyle as United States attorney and marshal, respectively, for the middle district of the state.

Both nominations represent reappointments and both appointees were endorsed by Senator Walter F. George, senior Georgia member, whose recommendation had been ignored in the collectorship vacancy resulting from the resignation several months back of Eugene Page, Columbus publisher.

Confirmation Seen.
While Senator George continued to withhold an announcement as to his intentions regarding the Allen nomination, the feeling of his friends was that in view of the Davis and Doyle appointments today he will now allow the Milledgeville man's name to be confirmed.

District Attorney Davis, who comes from Senator George's home town of Vienna, was given his first appointment four years ago at the instance of the senior senator. Marshal Doyle, a former superintendent of the Roosevelt farm in Meriwether county, was endorsed by both Senator George and Senator Richard B. Russell Jr., at the personal request of the President, but his reappointment is known to be entirely satisfactory to the senior member.

Thus, with a hasty stroke, Mr. Roosevelt has tended to dispel reports that the Allen appointment was the forerunner of general patronage reprisals to be directed at Senator George because of his opposition to the administration federal judiciary reorganization bill.

Punishment Denied.
Meantime, word has also been brought the senator by one of his colleagues in the upper chamber who recently called at the White House, that Mr. Roosevelt had no thought of punishing him for his court stand by ignoring his recommendations on the collectorship. Senator George had indeed urged R. E. Matheson, of Hartsell, while Senator Russell presented the candidacy of Mr. Allen, his political manager in the campaign against former Governor Talmadge last fall.

Senator George was naturally pleased with the nominations received today and under the circumstances his friends predict that his disposition will be to let matters take their normal course. As a high ranking member of the finance committee, to which the Allen nomination was referred, he was in position to block confirmation had he desired.

Two other Georgia nominations were included in a batch of post-

already given by the kidnaper. "However, I want to assure the party or parties holding my wife that I am willing and anxious to follow implicitly and without question any further instructions given and that they will be treated in the strictest confidence. "In order that the persons holding my wife for ransom may reach me freely and at any time without danger of being observed or overheard, I request that all law enforcement officers and press representatives withdraw from my residence, the grounds and the vicinity, so that the coast will be entirely clear to reach me without any risk or danger of observation."

Earlier, Parsons had planned to go to the Jamaica bus station tonight, complying in every way with the following ransom note: "Bill Parsons—I have your wife. Bring $25,000 to the Jamaica Bus terminal within 24 hours. My man will meet you and call you by name. Do not bring cops. If you do Alice will never speak to you again."

The note was written in pencil on cheap, blue-lined paper and was found in an envelope tucked into the lap-robe of Mrs. Parsons' automobile. It was the only authentic clue. A blood-stained hatchet was found on the Long Island estate, but police believed it had been used to kill a chicken or a quab and they worked on the theory that Mrs. Parsons was alive.

The Parsons, listed in the social register and due to inherit considerable money soon, ran a squab farm here on the tip of Long Island. Mrs. Parsons is related to the celebrated and wealthy Pratt family which owns large stretches of Long Island property.

Parsons was not at home yesterday when his wife disappeared. He had gone to New York city to meet two Russians who were supposed to give him the recipe for a famous quab paste. Thus the only information given to police was supplied by Mrs. Anna Kupriyano, who claims to be a member of the Russian nobility and who has made her home with the Parsons since she came to this country. Her 11-year-old son, Roy, also lives in the rambling white house surrounded by 25 acres that are thick with squabs and pigeons.

This was the theory that Mme. Kupriyano told when police arrived today.

Around 11 o'clock yesterday morning an automobile drove into the Parsons estate, occupied by a middle-aged man and woman. They called to Mrs. Parsons who went to the car and talked with the couple for a few minutes. Then Mrs. Parsons shouted into the house that she was going to the Sammis home in Huntington. In her blue dress with red buttons, a blue hat, black shoes and stockings and carrying a white beaded handbag, Mrs. Parsons got into the car. It drove away. Laborers working on a nearby highway said they, too, had seen the automobile, but insisted it was occupied by two women, and that no man was in it.

Additional Confusion.
The story became still more confusing when Mrs. Leonard Newton, of Stony Brook, told police she had seen Mrs. Parsons drive through the town just before 1 p. m. yesterday—almost two hours after the supposed kidnapping occurred—in an automobile occupied by only one other person. Mrs. Newton said she was unable to say whether Mrs. Parsons' companion was a man or a woman.

Mrs. Parsons is well known on this section of Long Island. Despite the fact she is highly eligible for society, she takes no part in formal social functions. She prefers to raise squabs and pigeons, to spend her evenings reading and she seldom is seen in Long Island's exclusive clubs and cabarets.

Friends described her as gay and charming, a prematurely gray woman, who is 36 years old and only five feet tall. She bears a close resemblance in face and figure to Anne Morrow Lindbergh.

AUXILIARY TO LEAD IN TRIBUTE TO FLAG

Rites Are Scheduled for Sunday in Piedmont Park.

Flag Day will be observed in Atlanta Monday by women of Atlanta Unit No. 1, American Legion Auxiliary, and the girls of the Junior Auxiliary through the sale of lapel flags on the streets.

Atlanta Lodge No. 78 and Decatur Lodge No. 1602, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, will join in exercises in observance of Flag Day at 3:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon in the grove at Piedmont park, when George B. Hamilton, Georgia state treasurer, will deliver the patriotic oration. Headquarters for the flag sale of the auxiliary will be set up in the Citizens & Southern National Bank building. The sale will begin at 8 o'clock Monday morning and run through noon.

Officers and committees from Atlanta and Decatur Elks' lodges arranged the Sunday program and will be in charge of the exercises. Music will be furnished by the Decatur Elks' band.

The complete program follows: Music, "Star-Spangled Banner," band.

Introductory exercises, exalted rulers and other officers. Prayer, Dr. Herman L. Turner. "O, Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," band.

"History of the Flag," exalted rulers and degree team. Altar service, esquires and officers.

outskirts of Seville, killing eight persons and injuring 72.

The bombardment of the civil population—the first undertaken by the Loyalists in the 11-month-old civil war—followed an open threat by Indalecio Prieto, Loyalist minister of national defense, to resort to the same tactics as has been employed by the Nationalists.

"Terror With Terror."
Prieto said last Saturday, in a note to the ministry of interior, that the Loyalists had refrained from "war against civilians" but that in view of persistent insurgent bombings it would be necessary to "meet terror with terror."

Insurgent dispatches said that many persons were killed in a revolt at Almeria, southern Loyalist seaport that virtually was wiped out by German warships two weeks ago.

The revolt was started, according to reports, by anarchists and syndicalists who rebelled against the Valencia government's authority. Troops were rushed to the town to quell the trouble.

FRANCO REJECTS FRENCH MEDIATION

PARIS, June 10.—(UP)—Generalissimo Franco, of the Spanish insurgents, about to unleash one of the biggest offensives of the war on the northern front, tonight rejected French mediation efforts with announcement that "Bilbao must fall first!"

Franco's defiance was given to a group of unofficial French emissaries who approached him tactfully, on a plan to bring about an at least temporary armistice in Spain.

Their suggestion was similar to that broached by British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden a month

Nurse Admits Hoax in Tale of Plot To Kidnap Grandson of John D. Sr.

Scion of Wealth Refuses To Prosecute Girl and Tells Her He Will Probably See Her Later; "Suspect" Released by Police.

CHICAGO, June 10.—(AP)—A sobbing young nurse confessed today she "framed the whole story" of a plot against John Rockefeller Prentice because she fancied he was losing interest in her.

Her statement, announced by Assistant State's Attorney Emmett Moynihan, ended a serio-comic episode involving the 27-year-old nurse, Miss Margaret Montgomery, the grandson of the late oil tycoon, John D. Rockefeller Sr. and suspicions of a sinister kidnapping scheme.

Prentice, 34, bespectacled attorney and a bachelor, confronted the tearful girl and said:

"Well, I'm surprised, Peg." He declined to prosecute. The slender nurse was released. As she left the prosecutor's office, Prentice shook hands and observed:

"I'll see you later, probably." The double-time drama began early today. Miss Montgomery was picked up by a police squad at an Ashland avenue restaurant, after she had called Prentice and asked him to meet her there. The gist of her account to officials was this:

ago during one of the many critical periods of international complications growing out of the civil war.

"This is no longer a simple civil war," Franco was said to have told the envoys. "It is an international war between Spanish nationalism and the internationalism of Moscow. The war must continue until one of the two is crushed in Spain."

SENATE APPROVES TAX DODGING QUIZ

Next, Dr. Dadiani, who described himself as the son of Prince Jean Dadiani and Princess Marie Elvire, of Rumania, appeared before the captain with the news Peroni was not to be found.

He said Peroni was unable to sleep the night before and that he left his bunk with the explanation: "I'm going on deck to find that beautiful blonde German girl."

Peroni Missing.
When the boat reached here the master reported Peroni missing. Dadiani said he was going to Warsaw and planned to leave the ship at Hamburg.

Then Dadiani returned to the ship and promptly vanished. Officers said he disappeared while the ship was in port overnight. Left then to the "beautiful blonde German girl," the police began checking Dadiani's story.

ANTI-LYNCHING ACTION ADVANCES IN SENATE

WASHINGTON, June 10.—(AP) A favorable report from a senate judiciary subcommittee on the Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill sped another major controversy toward the senate floor today.

Chairman Van Nuys, Democrat, Indiana, of the subcommittee, said he hoped to win approval of the bill by the full committee Monday. This would send the controversial measure to the senate, where southern senators have filibustered against such legislation in the past.

Headed by Governor Clyde Hoey and his family, North Carolinians came from far and near to see a big pageant at near-by Penderlea homesteads, a Resettlement Administration project, and to hear Mrs. Roosevelt speak here at the strawberry festival.

Mrs. Roosevelt is to arrive here by train early tomorrow.

NEW LABOR JUNTA LOOMS IN ATLANTA

AFL Suspension of 'Outlaw' Unions May Create Second Central Council.

Organized labor in Atlanta yesterday faced possibility of the setting up of a second local central labor body, after the Atlanta Federation of Trades had voted Wednesday night to suspend locals affiliated with national or international unions not now in good standing with the American Federation of Labor.

The city federation's action followed orders of William A. Green, AFL president, to this effect. It was understood the suspended unions now have more than 3,600 members in Atlanta, embraced in two locals of textile workers, one of automobile workers and one of lady garment workers.

Meantime, A. Steve Nance, heading one faction of the Georgia Federation of Labor, announced executive board members of his group would meet here Sunday, presumably to draw up a formal answer to orders by the AFL executive council that Nance and O. E. Petry, secretary-treasurer of the Nance group, cease calling themselves officers of the Georgia federation. The AFL order also directed that executive board members consider the order applying to them as well as to Nance and Petry.

22,149 FULTON CITIZENS CAST VOTES TUESDAY

Official returns from Fulton county in the June 8 election were certified to the secretary of state yesterday by Claude C. Mason, chief clerk of the Fulton ordinary, and receipts were obtained.

According to the official tabulation, 22,149 Fulton citizens utilized their voting privilege in Tuesday's election. Approximately 50,000 were registered.

Life Guards Asked For DeKalb Pools

Employment of trained life guards to protect swimmers in DeKalb county pools and a weekly inspection of life-saving equipment were recommended in the presentments of the DeKalb grand jury yesterday.

The body said failure of operators to provide adequate life-saving equipment was responsible for recent drownings in DeKalb county pools. The commissioner of roads and revenue was urged to conduct weekly inspection tours of the pools.

Election laws requiring ballots to be numbered and citizens to register and vote in the same precinct should be changed, the grand jurors declared.

Again the jurors asked the removal of the DeKalb county jail to a new location.

SIR CECIL HANBURY, 66, SUCCUMBS IN LONDON

LONDON, June 10.—(AP)—Sir Cecil Hanbury, 66, conservative member of the house of commons for North Dorset since 1934, died here tonight.

He attracted criticism in January, 1936, during the Italo-Ethiopian War when he sent 100 pounds ($500) to the Italian Red Cross as a token of sympathy for "Fascist Italy and her magnificent soldiers." He expressed disgust with "the iniquitous sanctions."

the city's "iron ring" of defenses within 48 hours.

The "iron ring" stretching in a wide arc around the besieged Basque capital, is the last defense barrier for 340,000 terrorized men, women and children.

Plans Complete.
An Argentine diplomat, returning from General Davila's headquarters across the frontier, said the Rebel leader told him that all plans for the "big push" were complete.

The aviation, he said, will launch the attack by dumping hundreds of tons of bombs on the "iron ring" defenses along a two-mile front, probably near Lemona, southeast of Bilbao.

Generalissimo Francisco Franco, it was reported, will hold up all large-scale operations in other parts of Spain until Davila's armies smash through and seize Bilbao.

Davila, outnumbered by his Basque enemies in manpower, is speeding up recruiting throughout insurgent Spain. Between 5,000 and 6,000 Moors—most savage fighters in the Rebel armies—have been rushed to the Bilbao front from Morocco and 25,000 new foreign legionnaires and Fascist recruits have been pressed into the offensive.

ATLANTA, GA., JUNE 11, 1937.

SIMPLICITY AT THE END

Jean Harlow, most glamorous of all Hollywood's "glamor girls," was buried on Wednesday. Her funeral services were held in a small chapel. They were attended only by her family and close friends in the profession in which she ranked so high. The rites consisted only of a few favorite songs and a simple service read by a Christian Science reader.

The world will approve this final chapter of a career lived under the glare of that publicity which is an integral part of a screen favorite's existence.

Hollywood has been criticized oftentimes for its much publicized antics. The finger of the exploiter has been visible too often, even in the most sacred moments of life and death and in the domestic affairs which should, in all decent restraint, be dedicated to privacy.

Perhaps a large proportion of this over-publicizing of private lives is necessary. Screen personalities, to large degree, depend upon the printed word for success. It is the life blood of film prominence.

Too often, though, that craze for public notice has resulted in offenses against good taste and understandable disgust among cultured people.

The story of Jean Harlow's funeral offers grateful contrast. By her own wish, expressed before she died, her funeral was a thing of beautiful simplicity, a dignified tribute to a girl whose life brought entertainment to millions and who now rests in that peace which comes at last to all, the prominent and obscure alike.

THE SCENE SHIFTS

Adolf Hitler is to address a group of trusted Nazi followers on problems of the Polish frontier. The address will be made on June 19 in a small town on the border of the free state of Danzig, the port city of the famous "corridor" which gives Poland access to the sea but which at the same time severs East Prussia from the rest of Germany.

Thus the absorbing drama of Europe shifts the scene, like the fast-moving scenario of a screen drama, from Spain to Germany and Poland. The eyes of the observing world turn to Marienwerder to await the next development in the plot.

The "Polish corridor" has been a potential breeder of conflict ever since it was created by the treaty of Versailles. The port of Danzig once belonged to Poland. It was taken by Germany, thus closing Poland's only access to the seas and oceans of the world.

Then, at Versailles, it was made free, but by doing so East Prussia was severed from Germany. It was as though a foreign nation possessed a strip cutting off New England from the rest of the United States.

There is understandable resentment at this situation in Germany. Yet Poland will never allow her ocean doorway to be closed without protest.

Should the fiery Dr. Fuehrer deliver one of his inflammatory addresses on June 19, it might easily be the spark to start a new armed conflict in eastern Europe.

Should Germany and Poland clash, Russia would, in all probability, come to the aid of Poland.

Reports of a new conspiracy in Russia to overthrow the Stalin government add still another angle to the situation. This latest plot is of serious import, in that it is understood to have been born among high officers of the Red army. One hundred army leaders have been arrested. There will be the inevitable aftermath of trials, either much publicized or utterly secretive. There will be executions and a new potential revolt will have been smothered.

When the army becomes the source of anti-government plots, however, the tenure of Stalin cannot be overly secure.

A golfer who analyzes the ducal style says Windsor is inclined to press. Nothing so militates against peace as the tee as suddenly remembering an archbishop.

They keep saying the next great war will be with insects. If Duce versus the Mediterranean fruit fly would be something.

As he foresees the arena of affairs, we have a pretty clear picture of Stanley Baldwin, which, for the moment at least, doesn't resemble George Arliss.

Pennsylvania is erecting an "escape-proof" prison at Mount Gretna, but of course one may always conceal a parole commissioner in a cake.

A new machine, for encasing the wiener automatically in the bun without the aid of human hands, still lacks a name. Would dogmatic be it?

Speaking of the League of Nations—or were we?—the greens committee continues to do nothing about the divots in Spain.

Editorial of the Day

FARMER PROSPERS IN THE DUST BELT

(From the Augusta Chronicle.)

What do trees mean to a farmer? We are intensely interested in the story of a farmer who realizes the boon of trees, as told in the American Forest Magazine. He is J. J. Lydick, of Nebraska. His 250-acre farm lies in the dust storm belt.

Today the Lydick farm produces in drouth years twice as much corn per acre as surrounding farms do, his apples trees are loaded when neighboring ones are barren, his potato crop booms when the sun has dried up every other potato vine within ten miles.

Shortly after he bought his farm a quarter of a century ago, young Lydick suffered from hay fever. The doctors advised him to go to the mountains, where he could breathe the air of pine and fir. But Mr. Lydick chose to bring evergreens to his farm. He planted pine and spruce and fir plentifully. His farm today is surrounded by a shelter belt of thousands of evergreens. These trees have guarded his farm from prairie winds, from dust storms. They have also retained the moisture in the land.

Today on the open market Mr. Lydick's farm would bring double the prevailing price an acre for like farms in the same locality.

Within the zone of protection from these living green walls, in the drouth year of 1934, Mr. Lydick's potatoes yielded 200 bushels to the acre, while other potato patches in Burt county dried out. Not a bushel of potatoes was grown within a radius of 10 miles of his farm.

His cornfield was not irrigated, but the yield was 35 to 40 bushels to the acre, while neighboring fields without the benefit of shelter belts, were burned up by hot winds. Likewise, his orchard was an inspiring sight.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON.

SUGAR

WASHINGTON, June 10.—A catchy new "compromise" on supreme court packing has been wafted softly within congress by White House wafers. It is likely to be the one pressed in the end, instead of the generally known compromises which are being publicly discussed.

This one has sugar all over it. The basic idea is this: There are 10 sectional judicial circuits in the country, but only nine justices of the supreme court to preside over them. Orderly procedure requires the appointment of one more justice so that each supreme court member will have one circuit under his jurisdiction. But procedure should be changed so that (and here is the concentrated saccharine for congressional palates), in the future, the justice for each circuit must be chosen from his sectional circuit court of appeals. Thus the court would eventually represent all sections of the country (and thus also will judicial patronage be opened to sections, particularly the south, where appointments have been scarce).

A second "but" in the proposition deals with the tough fact that the chief justice now presides over a circuit. It would obviously be unfair to appoint a chief justice from the same section of the country all the time, so orderly procedure would again require that the chief justice be made an eleventh member of the court, appointed from the nation at large.

EVENING UP

This is a well thought-out proposal which is the result of more than one sleepless night of official thinking. It sounds so orderly that it successfully disguises the fact that the President would get two additional supreme court appointments to uphold his legal interpretations.

The inside force of its appeal, however, is that it is politically inviting to southern and midwestern senators now opposing all court packing.

The present supreme court is composed of justices from the following states: New York, three (Hughes, Stone, Cardozo); Kentucky, (Brandeis, who really was appointed from Massachusetts); Tennessee (McReynolds, who really was appointed from New York); Utah, Minnesota and Pennsylvania (Sutherland, Butler and Roberts, respectively). A vacancy now exists for the Van Devanter appointment from Wyoming.

The talked-of "compromise" would prevent any new appointments from New York for a long time, and would force appointments from circuits not now represented on the court, including: Central Atlantic seaboard states, the South Central states (Oklahoma, Kansas, etc.) and the Southern states.

PROMOTION LIST

There is something behind mildly printed rumors that Ambassador Hugh Gibson in Switzerland may be brought back here as undersecretary of state. At present, the talk really represents interdepartmental official discussion of such a possibility, with a fair chance that it may work out.

Gibson rates as an unusually valuable career man. He has been stationed at the "listening post of the world," which is the League of Nations' headquarters. The only hitch is that the bigger job here pays $2,000 less money annually than he now receives. If this proves insurmountable, Gibson might be slated for Berlin, where Ambassador Dodd may soon find it convenient to retire.

Other career men on the private State Department list for promotion are: Ray Atherton, counselor at London; John Campbell White, consul general at Calcutta; J. Pierpont Moffatt, consul general at Sydney.

NO JOKES

It may be the heat and it may be the stupidity, but something has lately disturbed the normal good humor and friendly contact among a number of officials around the White House. Trusted pals have in some cases become just pals, and in other cases, not even that.

Close observers are inclined to blame the official spy system within the government. It is so extensive that very little goes unreported to the powers-that-be. Official and unofficial reporters and just plain voluntary eavesdroppers seem to be working on a commission basis.

It is so inefficient and bitter, a number of recent experiences indicate that the authorities are in some cases being misled. What the government seems to need is more accurate and less prejudiced spies. There is, for instance, the case of a staunch senatorial supporter of the President, who does not believe in all administration proposals, but makes the best of them. Unfortunately, he is an incorrigible "kiddier" and certain chiding remarks he dropped recently were passed along to the top without the numerous twist he originally gave them. He is so scared now he always officially labels his jokes as such.

LOYALTY

Mr. R. is being quoted as saying the selection of a New York mayor is a local matter (although he laughed outright at the suggestion of Senator Copeland as the Democratic nominee). A couple of Tammany district leaders were in to see him earlier about another nominee. They wanted his help in prevailing upon Senator Wagner to run.

His reply, as they are passing it around officially to their friends, was substantially this:

He would like to prevail upon Wagner, but would do nothing to hurt his friend, Mayor LaGuardia.

You can imagine what effect that had on the Tammanites, who went back to New York with their Democratic spirits drooping.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

School is out and so, to work
To recreate the world;
Dogmatic youth attacks the task
With banners high unfurled.

Too soon they'll learn they cannot
All things to heart's desire,
Be glad if they, ere growing old,
Can build a home hearth fire.

How Old
Is Your Mind?

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, delivered an address at the commencement exercises of that institution on the subject, "When Is a Man Old?"

"Unhappily," said Dr. Butler, "one may be young without being youthful, but happily one may be old without being aged."

Age of a man's mind and soul, he pointed out, cannot be measured in years, like that of his body.

"Many of the oldest minds in the world, of which by no means the least number are to be found in the United States, have not yet reached their 30th birthday," he continued. "They are fixed and set as to every conceivable question. They have definitely decided everything. That which is known is not worth knowing, and indeed should not be known at all. Minds and temperaments such as these have reached advanced old age, not of course, as measured in terms of years, but in fact. The mounting years find it growing older, but keeping itself youthful, and manifesting that youth in a hundred ways."

Examples
Down the Ages.

Dr. Butler then cites example after example of men, old in years, whose minds yet retained the full youthful vigor, even grew younger, with the advancing years. He includes in his list Cicero, Socrates, Pope Leo XIII, William Ewart Gladstone, Bismarck, Cardinal Newman, Disraeli, Chief Justice John Marshall, Elihu Root, General Smuts, Pope Pius XI, etc., etc.

He tells a story of Chauncey M. Depew by way of illustration.

"On his 90th birthday Mr. Depew was called upon by a representative of the press who brought him congratulations and good wishes."

He replied:

"I would like to say a statement from Mr. Depew as to how it felt to be 90 years of age."

"But," said Mr. Depew in a tone of startled surprise, "I am not 90 years of age. The young journalist, quite taken aback, said, 'But, Mr. Depew, my newspaper is very careful in these matters. Surely, they cannot have made a mistake. Were you not born, sir, on April 23, 1834?'"

"Certainly," answered Mr. Depew. "Then," said the journalist triumphantly, "surely that makes you 90 years old today."

"Oh," replied Mr. Depew with a characteristic smile, "I see, young man, I see. You are one of those who measure age by years. There is nothing in it, young man. Nothing in it."

See If You Catch
The Significance.

Those excerpts from Dr. Butler's address appealed as of special interest just at this time, hence their reproduction here.

Another
Quotation

Just to carry the flavor throughout today's column, here's a quotation that calls for no comment, from a book called "Laven-gro" by George Borrow. The author is talking with a gypsy.

"Life is sweet, brother," said the gypsy.

"Do you think so?"

"Think so! There's night and day, brother, all sweet things; there's likewise the wind on the heath. Life is very sweet, brother; who would wish to die?"

"It would wish to die?"

"You talk like a gorgio—which is the same as talking like a fool—were you a Romany Chal you would talk wiser. Wish to die, indeed! A Romany Chal would wish to live forever!"

"In sickness, Jasper?"

"There's the sun and stars, brother."

"In blindness, Jasper?"

"There's the wind on the heath, brother. If I could only feel that, I would gladly live forever."

Fair Enough

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Taxing NEW YORK, June 10.—

One great income tax Union which is generally overlooked is that collected by labor unions from a class of citizens, most of whom are considered to be too humble for the official attention of the Bureau of Internal Revenue. True, there is some clamor for a "widening of the tax base," but even in the improbable event of its being enlarged to catch a few brackets which are now beneath the interest of the treasury, the profits will not be very substantial.

But below these brackets and all the way down the line of occupations embraced in unions, even to the poorest, the income tax exists in practice, though under another name, proving that politicians and statesmen underestimate the people's ability to pay. The unions keep their own books and no politician would dare suggest that they be examined at a public investigation, with circus publicity, as that just isn't in the cards.

Yet it is interesting to speculate on the volume of money which the unions collect from a great section of the nation which the government, in its wisdom and mercy, has spared the dues of citizenship imposed on persons of better fortune. Labor leaders are not at all sentimental about ability to pay. That these revenues constitute an income tax levied by private interests cannot be doubted. The members pay dues based on their rate of pay, which is the principle of the official income tax, and in addition, many of them are subject to high, if not extortionate, license fees, failing the payment of which they may be prevented from earning a living.

Initiation

The initiation fee may be $50 or $600, and surely if any agency has the right to wring substantial sums from workmen as an entrance fee in the pursuit of happiness, the government should come first. Then, also, in the matter of the regular dues the government waives its tax interest in favor of the unions, which do not hesitate to tax people whom congress has exempted on the ground of their poverty.

It will be argued that these dues and license fees as well as assessments levied on the earnings of a group whom congress hasn't the heart to tax are voluntary contributions, but that contention is not consistent with the check-off system. If the union members were enthusiastic contributors to their labor organizations it would not be necessary to deduct the money at the pay-office.

Labor leaders have admitted that collections are unreliable when left to the willingness and conscience of the members. Moreover, it is quite possible for 49 per cent of a union membership to be unwilling about their union income taxes even if you ignore the possibility of individual exemption practiced by leaders who acquire the power to give or withhold jobs and to blackmail individuals with threats of expulsion. Expulsion is a terrible thing, and a man may pay high to escape it.

Labor politics is no less dark and ruthless than public politics, and the unions are extracting unknown, though obviously, enormous amounts from a private preserve of citizens whom the government exempts. I do not suggest that the federal income tax be applied to all classes, however poor.

Labor Leader

Only a labor leader would tax those whom the President has described as ill-clothed, ill-housed and ill-fed. On the contrary, I suggest that many labor leaders are much more rapacious than the government, and point out that the government wouldn't think of persecuting poor individuals by placing them on a blacklist for failure to shower down.

The well-to-do must meet the government on a different basis, but the official policy is lenience toward the humble toiler who then discovers himself accountable to a private and irresponsible authority with the power to inflict dreadful suffering on his family for failure to pay.

The government exempts him out of decent regard for his economic weakness, but then turns him over to a tax collector with no such qualms who may not even do him the honor of explaining from time to time what becomes of the money.

It is not only the employers who have trouble with labor leaders. There are many union members who are members against their will, but unprotected from terrorism, physical and economic, because no statesman will come to their aid for fear of being called an enemy of labor.

Max Baer Was Easy To Finish After Newspaper Stories Whipped Him

By ROBERT QUILLEN

One of the oldest and most successful devices of warfare is to lull the suspicions of the intended victim with soft words and friendly gestures and then "take him unawares."

"And Joab took Amasa by the beard with the right hand to kiss him. But Amasa took no heed to the sword that was in Joab's hand."

Intentionally or otherwise, a similar strategy is being employed now.

Scarcely a week passes without a new magazine article prophesying the horrors of the next war. Word and picture make it clear that nothing will be immune to destruction and no place will afford a refuge from the invader.

The only possible "good" of such articles is to make people hate and dread war and wish to escape it at any price.

That would be a great good indeed if the people of all lands were thus affected. But such articles are not printed in Germany, Italy and Japan, where dictators permit nothing to be said against the business of warfare, but only in America and other free lands whose people desire peace.

The effect, therefore, is to make war seem more hateful to peaceful lands, and then only, and encourage them to disarm and become easy prey for the lands that hope to profit by war.

Such propaganda is peculiarly effective in America, for we are an imaginative and high-strung people, gallant in action but easily scared. We behave rather well in the dentist's chair but suffer agonies in anticipation.

When we made war on Spain, congressmen representing coastal cities did their utmost to have battleships kept at home to protect their terrified constituents—a strategy that would have enabled poor old outclassed Spain to defeat us.

And when we entered Europe's last war, fear of submarines was so general that the most optimistic expected some loss of transports. Yet the army was moved across the Atlantic without the loss of a single ship conveyed by our navy.

The "next war" will be dreadful, as all wars have been, but it will be human compared to the wholesale massacres of Tamerlane and Genghis Khan. And civilization won't be "wiped out" except by years of scientific destruction.

One of the new horrors promised by the propagandists is an epidemic of fatal diseases started by dropping germs in glass tubes. It sounds dreadful, but it doesn't impress medical men. A few years ago a tray of glass tubes containing germ cultures was dropped from a laboratory window on one of the main thoroughfares of Paris, releasing enough deadly germs to wipe out the entire population, but there was not a single case of infection.

Sane men will do their utmost to prevent war, but peaceful lands will gain nothing by living in terror of it.

WORLD'S WINDOW

By PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.

Defeatism.

NEW YORK—"Oh that I had wings like a dove! For then would I fly away to a safe refuge. It sounds poetic, this old word of the Psalmist. It is as if here someone is speaking, who, consumed by nostalgia, wants to get away from all that is base and vulgar, away to the idea. He does not know the goal to which he wants to fly, at any rate: it is something vague, but is another realm, something better, something higher. But when you look at the context from which the above words are taken (Psalm 55:6) you discover that they are terrible words. They are not just the poetic sigh of an idealist, but the cry of someone who is tired of life, who has no more courage left: the words of a defeatist.

The Hebrew poet to whom these words are attributed lived hundreds of years before Christ, in a city and in conditions of complete demoralization. In whatever direction he turns his glance, he sees violence and quarrels. Commerce and justice are corrupted. Misery and evil reign supreme. He draws a dimly black picture of his environment. He sees not the slightest ray of light. He can't bear it any longer. He wants to get away from it all. He wants to flee. He wants to reach a safe refuge. He desires a place of security in the storm and stress around him.

This defeatist poet, although separated from us by centuries, stands nearer to us than we would imagine. His cries of anguish are actually. Also we have that feeling very often that everything is crumbling and breaking down. The facts overwhelm us. We see before our eyes how many things that were once deemed lockfast and sacrosanct have begun to shake. States collapse. Systems of production tremble as houses whose foundations have been undermined. We see new forces in society working the mass mind to the point of insanity. The roaring machinery of our age may come to a standstill any moment. Moral, spiritual values are cast overboard as if they were ragged worn-out clothes. You meet serious-minded people everywhere who say: "We don't know to what we must hold fast. We don't see any sense to this life, no goal. No remedy awaits. We wished we could get away from it all."

No Escape From Ourselves.

If we take a look inside our own hearts, we also grow discouraged. We see all that pride, that covetousness, that greed, that hasty anger. Maybe we have been fighting against it for years. But we seem always to lose ground. "When I want to do good, lo evil is present," says St. Paul. We understand that plaint. We, too, grow weary and tired. Oh, to get away from it all!

And yet we have no right to run away. Defeatist desires are Elevation Through Faith.

There is another word in the same Psalm which shows us the right way: "Cast thy burden upon the Lord and He will sustain thee" and the poet adds: "I put my trust in Thee!" Whoever says this, acquires wings which lift him above the greatest difficulties. Wings of trust in God.

Doves have wings which transport them to the safety of a rock. In the same way trust and confidence in God will bring us to safety and security at the divine heart. That heart which stands always open for us as Christ Jesus, who is with us all our days, even in our darkest days. With these wings we flee from the visible reality to the invisible reality.

Doves have wings which lift them on high, where the vision is broad and wide and whence the earth looks small. Faith lifts us to heights where we see things in a new perspective, sub specie aeternitatis. From that point we see how small many things are which now frighten us. We acquire the long view, something of the divine view and the divine plan. There we see that, in spite of the chaos and confusion, there is One who reigns, in whose hands are the reins. There we learn that whatever we do forms a small part of God's work.

DEFICIT IS FEARED IN CITY FINANCES BY END OF YEAR

Mayor Hartsfield Warns Administration Must Use Rigid Economy.

Instead of a surplus of funds, the municipality may end the year in the red, Mayor Hartsfield and city tax assessors said yesterday afternoon after a preliminary study of constitutional amendments voted in Tuesday's state election.

A periodic report filed by assessors yesterday indicated that the city tax digest continues to increase at the same rate for the remainder of the year as it did in 1936, property values listed at $3,347,215 more than were anticipated in the January finance sheet would be recorded. The addition in values would mean an increase of $141,902 in revenue.

Hartsfield and Joe C. Little, senior tax assessor, late yesterday pointed out that passage of the $300 exemption on personal property of citizens would cost the municipality between $75,000 and $100,000 a year, and that the application of the intangibles property classification was still a matter of conjecture.

Opinion Asked.
An opinion was sought from Bond Almond, assistant city attorney, as to whether the state not only could classify properties, but also fix assessments under the amendment. Losses to the municipality were variously estimated at from a few thousand dollars a year to as much as $600,000 annually, depending on how the newly approved amendment is applied.

Senator G. Everett Millikan, of the 35th Georgia, Fulton county, district, said he will fight for three mills of the five-mill tax levy on intangibles for the city, but doubt was expressed that more than two would be voted. Under the law, the state will collect all intangible taxes and will give back a portion of what is collected to local governments.

If only stocks and bonds are regarded as intangibles by the state, the loss to the city would be practically negligible, it was said, but if choses in action, bills collectible, notes and accounts are listed, the city would lose hundreds of thousands a year.

Property Gain Seen.
Assessors filed their report with B. Graham West, city controller, and intimated that the end of the year might list properties in excess of the $350,000,000 estimated at the first of the year. This digest, as then estimated, would bring in $5,950,000 in revenue.

"We were careful not to build the hopes of the city too high," Little explained. "We have a possibility of getting more than we estimated, but these other contingencies are a real threat to city finances."

The mayor also pointed out that the recently approved reduction of the increase in the water rate to wholesale users from 30 to 25 per cent will cost the city $36,000 a year in receipts from that source.

Baptist Preacher Taught John D. Art of Giving Away His Millions

'Fred Gates Was Most Valuable Man I Was Ever Associated With,' Was Frequent Estimate by Praise-Sparing Rockefeller.

This is the 15th chapter in a series of daily installments which are an authentic chronicle of Mr. Rockefeller's life and career.

By JOHN E. WINKLER.
(Copyright, 1937, for The Constitution and the North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

"Fred Gates taught me the art of scientific, fundamental giving. He was the most valuable man I was ever associated with."

Unqualified assertions were rare with John D. Rockefeller. However, intimates often heard him give this estimate of Frederick Taylor Gates, a remarkable preacher-businessman, who was chief Rockefeller almoner for almost 40 years.

As director of Rockefeller's "Benevolent Trust," Gates supervised the distribution of hundreds of millions of dollars. He pleased John D. immensely by conducting the Benevolent Trust on the same mathematical, wasteful lines Rockefeller himself employed in building up Standard Oil.

Gates has been a clerk in a store and bank. He worked his way through the University of Rochester, N. Y., and Rochester Theological Seminary. In the early 1880's he entered the Baptist ministry. He was a natural mixer and seemed veritably to witch money from hard-boiled businessmen.

Spotted John D. Rockefeller conceived the idea of establishing a great Baptist university in the middle west. The papers were filled with fabulous stories of Rockefeller's growing fortune. He made up his mind that Rockefeller was the man to back his educational project.

Accordingly, early on a May morning of 1889, by appointment, Gates rang the bell at John D.'s old-fashioned, ugly mansion at Atlanta and the members of city council that we have no money to spend," he said. "We are in better financial condition. That is true, but we must in all honesty apply the new monies we collect to retirement of the city deficit and to meet emergent demands for services."

"We have no large sums to play with. We must adopt a sane financial policy and administer new sums for the purpose for which it was intended. It also is indicated that water receipts for the year will fall appreciably below estimates."

There were several reports at the city hall that efforts to earmark what was regarded as an indicated increase in revenue from property values for various undertakings, including $67,000 for schools.

WOMEN'S MARKETS WILL LOCATE HERE

Appeal Made for Additional Locations.

Atlanta will become the clearing house for the women's co-operative markets being established throughout the state, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. Robin Wood, director of the woman's division of the state Bureau of Markets.

She made the statement in an appeal to the local committee to find nine other places in which to establish such markets in Atlanta. One market already had been opened here.

A market will be opened soon at Decatur with Mrs. W. J. Hudson in charge. It will be sponsored by the Decatur Woman's Club. Another is being planned for West End, with the Woman's Club of West End and the West End Woman's Club as sponsors. Another is planned for Tenth street, with the Atlanta Woman's Club as sponsor. Members of Mrs. Wood's Atlanta committee are Mrs. John Toler, Mrs. Claude C. Smith, Mrs. John K. Ottley Sr., Mrs. Ruth Campbell, Mrs. Pauline Branyon and Mrs. Robert C. Hunt.

GRAND JURY ASKS ELECTION REFORM

Numbered Ballot Criticized by DeKalb Inquirers.

Elimination of numbered ballots and tightening of registration and voting laws in Georgia were recommended yesterday by the DeKalb county grand jury.

Other major recommendations filed by the jury include closer supervision of places of amusement, swimming pools and resorts, and an accounting of money collected at school athletic exhibitions and entertainments.

Presentments pointed out that thousands of dollars are collected through these sources each year and that no accounting is made. Removal of the DeKalb county jail from the old structure near the business district to a more modern and less offensive location also was urged.

U. S. TO RESERVE UNDERPASS CASH

City Granted Time To Work Out Plans.

Federal engineers yesterday assured Mayor Hartsfield that the $400,000 dedicated to the construction of an underpass at Marietta street and North avenue will be held intact temporarily at least to work out details of a right-of-way.

The mayor approved a council resolution calling on Fulton county to supply $50,000 for the undertaking, and on the railways involved and the state to supply $100,000 each. The city agreed in the resolution to make another $36,000 available.

City engineers estimate the cost of the right-of-way at about $400,000. The city is unable to provide that sum.

10 COUNTIES LAG ON REPEAL RETURN

Referendum Vote Must Be Filed With State Secretary by 6 P. M. Today.

All but 10 of Georgia's 159 counties filed returns with the secretary of state yesterday in Tuesday's prohibition repeal referendum.

An official compilation of the 149 counties gave the following vote:

For repeal: 90,650.
Against repeal: 94,359.
The majority for prohibition was 3,709.

Ordinaries have only until 6 p. m., central standard time, today to have the returns in the secretary of state's office. Any not filed by then will not be counted in the results of the vote.

The 10 missing counties, all of which officials expected on "the first mail," were Dodge, Fannin, Gilmer, Gordon, Jackson, Jasper, Lanier, Laurens, Stewart and Telfair.

Partially complete returns were filed from the last two. Unofficial returns from all of the missing counties showed they voted dry, two of them—Gilmer and Gordon—by majorities of close to 1,000 each.

DIRIGIBLE PROPOSAL STIRS UP OPPOSITION

Company Plan Envisages Construction of Plant Near Americus.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—(AP) The War, Navy and Commerce Departments joined today to fight a proposal that the government subsidize private construction of two large dirigibles for trans-Atlantic service.

They have filed statement of opposition with the house interstate and foreign commerce committee, which is considering a measure for a $12,000,000 loan to the Responder Aeronautical Engineering Corporation, of Rhode Island, for dirigible development.

Roland B. Respass, president of the corporation, told a subcommittee his concern could build two dirigibles larger than the ill-fated Hindenburg and have them in operation in 18 months. The craft would use nonexplosive helium gas. The plant would be erected near Americus, Ga., Respass said.

FULTON COMMISSION MEETS AT NOON TODAY

Fulton county commissioners will meet in special called session at 12 o'clock today at the commissioners' chambers on the fifth floor of the courthouse, Frank Fling, clerk of the commission, announced last night.

The meeting is understood to be for the official ratification of 17 new salary raises which were contained in the minutes of the last regular session of the board June 2. Other matters may be discussed, it was announced.

A possibility was rumored yesterday that certain groups of county employees, cut during economy moves of the commission during the depression, would appear before the board today to request a 10 per cent salary restoration.

CIVITAN INDORSEMENT GIVEN CITY PLANNING

A resolution by the Atlanta Civitan Club endorsing the proposed survey of local government was on record yesterday.

The resolution praised the Chamber of Commerce for initiating the movement and the county commissioners for making an appropriation of its share of the cost, and urged the city council to take similar action.

GOVERNMENT SURVEY INDORSED BY CIVITANS

Proposals of the Chamber of Commerce and businessmen that an impartial survey of the local county and city governments be made were indorsed yesterday in resolutions adopted by the Atlanta Civitan Club.

The members thanked the commerce group and the county commissioners for agreeing to share the expense of the survey and expressed hope the city would join in financing the "worthy enterprise."

The resolutions set out that the club recognizes the proposed survey as "most desirable and as one that should enable the citizens to locate and correct any weakness in the city and county governments."

ANITA LOOS' SARATOGA

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE. Carol Clayton postpones her marriage to wealthy Hartley Madison and starts to play the horses so that she can pay Duke Bradley her dead father's debt of $25,000. Carol resents the handsome bookmaker because he had accused her of marrying for money. Her luck is phenomenal. Then Duke, warning her of Hartley's breakdown, gets Hartley to join her in Florida. He is grateful when Hartley places his first bet with him, for Carol has determinedly thwarted all his moves in this direction. Carol persuades Hartley to get him out of Duke's clutches. Duke follows him out and has won $10,000 from him when Carol suddenly appears. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALLMENT XIX.

"Sometimes, yes; but always—that is a different matter. Can't you see the old law of averages is just beginning to work for me? Be a good sport and give it a chance anyway. You can and you are the only person in the world who can."

She wanted to help Duke and at the same time she wanted to hurt him. She hesitated. Before she could speak, a man came up to them and spoke.

"Pardon me, Miss Clayton," he said. "My name is Dinsmore. I'm at Mr. Madison's table. It's right over there."

"Good evening," said Carol. "We are going there, Mr. Bradley and I. Will you forgive me for not recognizing you at first?"

"Oh, that's all right. You never saw me before. I knew you from your picture."

Duke saw Carol stiffen. She could not, in reason, blame him for that picture, but he knew she was not always reasonable. And now this boor, with his insufferable manners, had spoiled everything.

"Darling," cried Madison as they came near the table.

He was so glad to see her that he forgot all the people around them. He put his arms around her and kissed her. She had given him a warm smile when she saw him, but she drew away quickly from his embrace.

"I lost my head," said Madison. "But don't mind—everyone knows we are engaged and one look at you will be excuse enough for what I did."

Carol gave him another tender smile. She had been embarrassed at his display of affection before so many people. But she knew that was not the only reason she had drawn away from him.

The introductions were an ordeal to Carol. They were all polite, cordial even. But she had a feeling, though no one but Dinsmore was brazen enough to mention it, that they were thinking of that newspaper picture.

Then Duke, sitting next to her, did mention it.

"That man is a rotter—Dinsmore. I mean," he said in a low voice. "If it hadn't been for the scandal it would have caused, I'd have given him one black eye."

"Well, there was a picture of me in the paper—he wasn't telling me anything I didn't know. And it was the kind of picture people don't forget," she said in a bitter tone. "I didn't see the picture, Carol. It would never have got out in one piece, if I had. I was running to get away from you. You followed and the photographer did the rest. You don't blame me for the whole unfortunate affair, do you?"

"What do you think?" she asked grimly.

Duke reached for a glass of champagne. He was not a hard drinker, but tonight he thought there was no wine enough in the world to wash away his worry, to make him carefree again. But he would not give in to his gloomy thoughts. He couldn't. He had thought he could make an ally of Carol. It seemed he couldn't. He must depend on himself. He had fought her before and won. He must do it again.

"It's doubly hard to go," Madison was saying, "now that Carol has come."

"Go!" cried Duke in astonishment.

"Why you know I said a while ago I had to take the early plane tomorrow."

"Yes—but that was a while ago. This is now. And with Miss Clayton coming across the continent just to see you—I'm surprised at you, Madison. What do you all say?" he said looking around the table.

"Stay!" they cried.

"Show him you mean it, folks," said Duke. "Give him—and Miss Clayton, too, of course—a great big hand."

They rattled their favors, they beat their hands together, they shouted.

"Perhaps I missed my calling," said Duke to Carol. "Seems to me I might have become a first-class cheer leader. What do you say?"

"That Hartley, despite all your buffoonery, hasn't said he'll stay. And he won't, I promise you that."

Madison beckoned to a waiter and asked him if he would bring him a blank check.

"No need of that," protested Pruett. "If you're afraid you haven't enough cash to see you through to New York, I'll let you have what you need."

"It's not that," answered Madison. "I have plenty of petty cash, as you might say, but I haven't $10,000. I must pay Duke here for my losses today."

The waiter who had hesitated when Pruett spoke, happened to glance at Duke, who quickly shook his head.

"Your credit is as good with me as it is with Mr. Pruett, Madison," said Duke. "Anyway, tomorrow you may win it all back from me. But by the time the first race starts tomorrow, I'll be almost home. I've had my holiday—and a glorious one—now I go back to the grind."

"You mean you're actually going? That you can resist the pleas of all these friends of yours? I'm disappointed in you, I am. And here I always took it for granted you were a good American!"

"I don't get the connection," said Madison laughing. "And I always passed in logic when I was in college. Go on. I'm interested."

"It ought to be plain to anyone that you don't believe in majority rule. You are in a minority of one, as the demonstration a moment ago showed."

Duke reached for his glass and as he did so, he saw Carol's hand on the table. It was clenched tight. He was afraid she would speak—would say that she had not voiced her opinion. Luckily it was Madison who spoke.

"You've all made it hard for me to leave," he said. "And I want to thank you for what Duke calls that demonstration. But there are other things beside believing in majority rule which add up to being a good American. One is to preserve friendly relations with foreign nations. And it just happens Ambassador Sigora will be waiting for me in New York. I can't let him down."

"Of course you can't," agreed Duke. "Who wants you to?"

"Is he in New York?" asked one of the men. "Because if he isn't here already, you can head him off—it takes only a few hours to go from Washington to New York, even by train."

Madison and Duke shook their heads simultaneously.

"How much does your telephone bill average monthly?" asked Duke. "You don't know, of course. New mind. That was just a rhetorical question and here's another: what earthly good is a telephone anyway, if not for just such crises as the present? That blessed invention will let you do your business and let you stay and all at one and the same time. Am I right?" asked Duke, glancing around the table as if he were polling a vote. "What do you say—you people noted the word round for your hospitality?"

"Stay in good old Cal-ey-for-ney-ay!" cried one of the women.

"Cal-ey-for-ney-ay!" repeated Duke. "That's a good one. Sounds like a perfect chant. So altogether folks," he urged, "Stay in good old Cal-ey-for-ney-ay."

It did sound like a chant as under his direction they took up the phrase, repeating it over and over.

"You make it all seem so easy to do what I want to do," said Madison. "But what about the ambassador?" You must keep in mind he isn't here tonight to be swept along by this—shall I say mass movement? Also he is not accustomed to having engagements with him broken. What reason can I give?"

"What's wrong with the truth?" asked Duke. "All my life I've been told that it works miracles or something or other."

"And the whole world loves a lover!" said another woman.

"Madam," said Duke, saluting her and speaking as if she had made a brilliant point. "So altogether folks," he urged, "Stay in good old Cal-ey-for-ney-ay."

The woman was neither young nor beautiful nor attractive, but Duke could have kissed her at that moment. In fact he could have kissed every woman at the table, slapped every man on the back. If he had trained them, they could not have been better stooges.

"I have an idea," said a man named Stanton, bowing to Carol. "Send him Miss Clayton's photograph. Then he'll understand."

Duke at that moment could willingly have killed the man. If he had deliberately tried to make a faux pas, he could not have done better. The man was not a boor like Dinsmore. He did not realize he had made a "break," but Duke heard quick little drawings-in of breaths and the women all smiled a trifle too sweetly at Carol.

"You make it harder for me with everything you say," said Madison. "I don't need to tell you it is hard for me to go just as Carol has arrived. But there is one thing everyone has overlooked. Carol can follow me in a day. Doesn't that settle everything. You will, won't you, dear?"

It was the first time Carol had spoken.

"I would," she said, "but I can't. You see, she looks at the table at everyone except Madison and Duke. 'I have a little business matter of my own to attend to and it happens to be here. Of course it isn't in a class with what Hartley has to do, but everything is relative and to me it is of the utmost importance.'"

UNCLE RAY'S Corner

MORE ABOUT THE AURORAS.

Most readers probably have seen the Northern Lights, or Aurora Borealis, at one time or another, but not many of us have had the good fortune to observe them in their full glory in a far northern place. Here are the words of George Kennel, who saw a splendid display in Siberia:

that same question has held the interest of many scientists. They are not certain that they have the full answer, but some facts are fairly clear. As we said yesterday, the lights are to be seen most often when the sun has many spots. This is good proof that the sun's rays have something to do with the lights.

Another fact is that the Northern Lights spread out from a region above the magnetic north pole. This indicates that the magnetism of the earth helps to produce them.

A modern theory is that "alpha and beta electric rays" from the sun strike the earth's air and help produce the lighting effects. They must travel in some way along the earth's "magnetic lines."

The question follows, "How do the rays of streamers travel thousands of miles southward, so they sometimes can be seen by people in southern Canada and in the United States?"

As we attempt to answer that, we must remember that the air around the earth contains the "dust" of millions of meteors which have burned to ashes after striking the air. Meteors contain large amounts of iron, and this metal—even in powdered form—may serve to carry electrical waves.

People living south of the equator do not have the Northern Lights, but they have something about equally as good—the Aurora Australis, or Southern Lights. Photographs show them to be of great beauty. Sometimes they appear as thick, brilliant curtains of light.

The leaflet called "Your Body at Work" may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope to me in care of The Atlanta Constitution.

But the end was not yet! The whole heaven seemed transformed into shattered rainbows. The sky was "one mellow, molting sea of color and fire, crimson and purple, and green."

We may wonder just what causes the Northern Lights, and Gains were limited to 5-32nds of a point or less and losses ranged to 1-8 of a point. The total volume for listed deferred obligations was about $300,000 face value, or less than that of one issue under what might be called normal activity.

The domestic corporate division worked a little lower as rail, utility and high grade liens dipped.

Industrials edged a little higher, however, and the general appearance of this portion of the list mildly encouraging for those championing higher prices.

Total turnover for all bonds $7,234,000, face amount again $7,477,000 Wednesday.

SALES TAX TALKED TO SET NEW DEAL GOING IN GEORGIA

Political Circles Mention
Levy as Sequel to Repeal Defeat, Revenue Loss.

By the Associated Press.
A sales tax to finance Georgia's "New Deal" agencies was discussed widely in political circles yesterday in view of defeat for prohibition repeal and the loss of a possible $3,000,000 income from liquor taxes.

Several legislators privately admitted the possibility of such a tax having to be passed, and one said "a sales tax of some kind seems inevitable."

This last statement came from a member of the general assembly who took part in writing tax laws to finance the program of Governor E. D. Rivers—a $10,000,000 expansion of the state's budget.

Rivers' Statement.
Just before the election, however, Governor Rivers issued a formal statement in which he said no new taxes would be necessary to finance his program—and he did not figure the liquor tax in his estimates of income.

A leading legislator—declining to be quoted by name—said "only a miracle boosting state income by a large amount will keep us from having to turn to a sales tax."

While the Governor apparently was satisfied sufficient money would be found for operating the state without resorting to new levies, other close observers predicted income would be insufficient to pay only between 60 and 70 per cent of the $20,000,000 appropriations for the year beginning July 1.

Given Alternative.
House Speaker Roy V. Harris, discussing financial affairs on the legislative floor last March, told members they would have to choose between a sales tax and a tax on liquor to finance the social security program calling for $3,250,000.

Reminded of the statement yesterday, Harris said he had no comment to make on it and added: "A study of one or two months will be necessary to determine what has to be done or what can be done."

He said it first must be determined what income will be derived from taxes already levied. Both gross receipts and sales tax bills were introduced in the 1937 general assembly, but legislators failed to debate them after passing a number of other revenue-raising measures.

These are the present sources which apparently have been exhausted by the present legislature:

These Exhausted?
Income—Rates hiked and exemptions lowered.
Cigars and cigarettes—Virtually doubled.

Beer—Doubled.
Wine—Taxed for the first time. Taxes which have no relation to the appropriations bill since their incomes are allocated directly for special purposes are:

Gasoline—To the state highway department, counties for roads and schools.
Bus and truck—To the state highway department for rural routes.

The state property tax—Now at three mills—could be raised to five to bring in $2,000,000 more a year, and some observers regarded repeal defeat as a practical mandate on the Governor either to do this or to request some new tax.

One new source of revenue possibly will come from the intangible tax amendment, adopted by the people the same day they rejected repeal.

It is around this amendment that Rivers expects to base the business of the special legislative session to be called "from Thanksgiving to Christmas."

It will permit a revamping of the property tax system and will allow, Rivers says, the taxing of intangible property now giving the state only a minor income.

Two hundred and thirty-six Georgia Tech graduates who are about to receive diplomas after four years of hard work, began commencement activities yesterday.

"I'll admit," said Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of the Tech, "that we work our boys as hard as any school, and harder than some, and while a student in school here he may sometimes feel that lighter work might be easier, but our graduates say that they appreciate the strenuous preparation they have had to go through with."

Tobacco-Chewing Dog Owned by Moultrie

MOULTRIE, Ga., June 10.—(P)—"Sportie," diminutive 10-year-old fox terrier, chews his tobacco with as much relish as any backwoodsman, and doesn't mind complaining when he fails to get a plug.

Owned by Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Tucker, of this city, "Sportie" has a certain one-two-three wag of his tail when he wants a chew of tobacco. Once he gets it, he goes off in a corner and munches contentedly. Unlike humans, however, the dog never spits, but swallows juice and eventually the plug.

"Sportie's" front paws, like those of habitual smokers, are stained yellow from holding down the plug while biting off a chew.

His master said the dog has been chewing regularly for eight years.
